THE FOES OF RESPONSIBLE GOVERNMENT.

The force of responsible government was fairly joined at Ottawa a few days ago.

Discussing the purchase of public service and public works, Mr. Foster moved:

"That all supplies purchased for the use of the various departments of the Government should be procured on the basis of public tender, and contract, under the supervision of a competent purchasing commission, and with regard primarily to quality and price."

In amendment Mr. Fielding moved:

"That all supplies purchased for the use of the various departments of the Government should be procured on the basis of public tender, and contract, so far as practicable, especially where large quantities of goods are required, with regard primarily to quality and price, and that all purchases should be made under the authority and direction of Ministers responsible to Parliament."

Between these resolutions the essential question is whether public money shall be expended by men who see no responsibility in the people and whom the people could not readily distrust or by men who owe their positions to the people and who maintain these positions only so long as they expend the public funds in accord with the approval of the people. But this difference is only a difference between the reasonable and irresponsible government.

The foundation of British liberty and every other principle of good government is the power of the public to control the expenditure of the public funds. Their right to do so is the right people asserted against the sovereign for generations. It was the root reason why one British monarch was beheaded and another deposed. To apply this principle the actual expenditure of the funds was taken out of the hands of the monarch and placed in charge of a ministry who could hold office only with the approval of a majority in Parliament.

Before this principle was adopted as a rule of administrative conduct England had indeed occasionally good government, but the good government came from the will of the sovereign and did not arise from any power of the English people to compel the sovereign to give them good government. Since this principle has been accepted as the key-note of the governmental system it has never been within the power of king or ministers to systematically and continuously misrule the people.

In every self-governing colony of the Empire, and in every democratic country in the world, the control of the public funds is the approximate right of the people as a whole. The representatives of the people have come to be the acknowledged bulwark of the public against incompetence, robbery and oppression. For this is the British Parliament known as the "Mother of Parliaments" because there was first clearly established and effectively applied the principle that the people's money must be expended by the people's representatives and by nobody else.

The proposal to place the expenditure of public money in the hands of a commission appointed for life and dismissible only by the unanimous or practically unanimous vote of Parliament, is merely an attempt to re-assert under another form the power of preventing the people from governing themselves, of making the executive elite to govern them as they see fit, and to make the people's money to be expended by the people's representatives and by nobody else.

That the proposal was to place this power in the hands of a commission instead of in the hands of a sovereign only means that we are living in the twentieth century instead of the nineteenth. But tyranny is not altered by altering its name, and an irresponsible commission would hold the power to public good as effectively as an irresponsible sovereign. And as the commission would consist of a few individuals instead of one, our likelihood of working harm would be proportionately increased.

Against the abuse of such body the people would have no effective remedy. Assuming a board of irresponsible commissioners all would be well, but in the present stage of social evolution an irresponsible commission could not be composed of certain, and from a corrupt commission the people would have no practical means of relief. So long as the commissioners' names are on friendly terms with the Government the Opposition could not displace them. So long as they maintained friendship with the Opposition, the Government could not remove them. And so long as they shared the spoils with vulnerable members on both sides of the House, the Government and the Opposition are both emboldened to dismiss them. Under such circumstances honest administration of the funds could only be expected if there could not be found on either side of the House members susceptible to bribery or pecuniary elation, and even then it would be difficult to ensure that the measure could calculate on always having commissioners stupid enough to quarrel with both sides at once.

It was fitting that the proposal to take this vital power from the people and hand it over to a body of irresponsible should come from the reactionary clique who are now in Opposition in Parliament. That it represents the wishes of the body of the Conservative party is not to be charged. The tortoise line in punishment is a thing of the past, but there still remains a strong taint of the vindictive in dealing with wrongdoers. Even the children come in for a small share of this, but society is waking up to the realization of a broader spirit, and there is a general working out of the problem of the "juvenile delinquent."

There are two reasons for depriving our children of their rights as citizens of society and the best interests of the children themselves. Society may deal with a child for its own safety, but there is an obligation on society to three around that child conditions and opportunities which will develop the stings of good citizenship and rid the child of the delinquent's taint.

Our police courts are busy and our judges can give only limited time to determine the facts of guilt, the need of imprisonment and the length of sentence. Perhaps when society groups a little better the idea of fair dealing with the juvenile, the length of sentence, will be left to the judgment of those in charge of the corrective institutions, so in the case of the inmate asylum or hospital, children are received at such institutions in all stages of physical, mental and moral ailment. They are not intelligently treated en masse, but have individual attention, suited to the special form of disorder or ailment with which they are afflicted.

It is a mistake to suppose that every homeless or delinquent child can be provided for in a private home. Some children are so stubborn, either because of birth or surroundings. Such children need expert care and guidance, such as the modern reformatories are capable of giving. The private home of the land can only provide for all normal children in need of homes, and in so doing will do more effectively work than any institution can do among such children. We are learning slowly and by the lessons of painful mistakes, that the best and safest way to deal with the delinquent child is to treat him, not as a criminal with a sentence to serve, but as a patient with a cure to be diagnosed and treated. Sometimes the cure is effected by a change of environment, sometimes by a long and intricate system of rebuilding the whole fabric of the mental and moral make-up; but it is never effected unless the basic principle of the treatment is love.

ON THE SIDE.

Eastern spring weather is a decidedly unpopular immigrant in the West.

Winter should understand that there is an essential difference between "lingering" in the lap of spring and setting down for a thirty day nap.

Now where can the Vancouver Sun get the notion that Confederation has never had "popularity" in British Columbia? An outside view would be that the Dominion holds an immense and continuing popularity in these parts as a target for popular popguns.

Someone has discovered that United States women are naturally attractive and some one else that the Republic is fast moving toward a monarchy. Which is another way of saying that a United States married woman would rather her daughter married an "American" than an Italian, provided they were both counts, and that an oblique country is not averse to gratifying her preference by fanning a national title democracy.

VIRTUES OF THE LEMNIX ACT.

Malcolm Herald. It is not at all surprising that the Lemnix Act has met with favorable comment in different countries. When it was first introduced in parliament we took it as a practical prescience of the future of the Dominion. The virtue of the measure, as it seemed to us, lay in its provisions to allow the sale of the land as soon as possible at the exact time in dispute, to place all the facts of the case before the public, to let the sense of right in the disputants, and by the force of the recommendations of the Board of Conciliation. The practical effect of the act for a year or so, has fairly borne out these favorable anticipations. It has put the public in various parts of Canada, and public opinion in the Dominion, in a position where, speaking in praise of this Canadian legislation, it is gratifying to us as well as to the British.

Bank Teller Disappears.

St. Catharines, Ont., April 11.—Harry Lewis, a young man engaged as a teller in the Bank of Montreal, disappeared on Saturday night, and has not been seen since. Mr. F. W. Pottenger, manager of the Bank of Hamilton, at St. Catharines, checked over the accounts yesterday and found everything all right. Lewis has confessed to have taken money to his credit in the bank at Hamilton, so that, whatever money he had taken, he was going to the bank to pay it back. It was not an account of financial trouble. When leaving Saturday he had his friends he was going to the Falls to spend Sunday.

Norwegian Cabinet Sustained.

Christiania, April 1.—The last net in the ministerial crisis which has lasted a year and a half was played today when the Norwegian cabinet of 21 members, including 10 members of the Left and ten Socialists against nineteen of the Right, were members of the cabinet. The cabinet was sustained by a vote of 111 to 104 in the Storting. The cabinet was sustained by a vote of 111 to 104 in the Storting.

STORMY MEETING OF G. T. R.

British Shareholders Score Bad Management of Road.

London, April 11.—The usual call and dried proceedings at meetings of the Grand Trunk railway Company were varied at today's semi-annual meeting of the directors of the road by heated charges of mismanagement and the report of the board was only adopted after earnest appeals for unity of interest for the company's credit had been made.

When presented at the meeting and the speech which looked the Canada was varied at today's semi-annual meeting of the directors of the road by heated charges of mismanagement and the report of the board was only adopted after earnest appeals for unity of interest for the company's credit had been made.

It was proposed to acquire land in certain districts along the line of the railroad and bonds would be issued to raise the necessary money. In order to raise the necessary money, it was proposed to acquire land in certain districts along the line of the railroad and bonds would be issued to raise the necessary money.

A. W. Smith, in concluding the meeting of the report, said that there were plenty of enemies of the road in Canada who would naturally use any difference that might arise. His statement brought the shareholders present on their feet with sharp criticism of the management of the company and the expression of dissatisfaction with the management were heard.

Mr. Charles declared that the proposal to be "imposed." Prior to 1891 he said they had a case of management of mismanagement by a board in Canada and as a result the company had plunged into terrible financial straits.

AN AFFLICTED FAMILY.

About a year ago our entire family were taken down with a gripe, one after another. The disease left us all in a very miserable, weak and run down state, and hardly able to travel alone. We had this great trouble for weeks. We decided we must have some good medicine to build us up. We had heard and read of the wonderful effects produced by Peppermint and came to the conclusion that it was just what we needed. We began using it, and it seemed wonderful the results that came, and so quickly, too. In a very short time while we were as well as ever, and have kept that way since. We believe that this good medicine over the people, and shall strongly recommend it at all times. Mrs. Samuel Gordon.

BANNER MARKET DAY.
The city on Saturday was crowded with a carnival from all parts of the district who took advantage of the fine weather and the fair in farm produce preceding seeking to come to the city to dispose of their produce. The market square was crowded and trading was brisk in every line. The market also feature in connection with the transactions of the day was the sale of numbers of horses, cattle and sheep auctioned off. The prices for particularly of horses and cattle were rather low, the purchasers evidently preferring to buy the cattle and sheep at the city.

At the convention of delegates held in Deer last week, a resolution was adopted for consideration was a proposal by D. G. Campbell, of Calgary, to sell the whole output of all the farms belonging to the members of the association on a consignment basis. The order of contract for each individual proprietor, embracing the produce was carefully considered, and after one or two slight alterations, a motion was carried to refer the matter to the members of the association were recommended to accept the agreement with Mr. Campbell.
